More than three decades ago, when school life was first thought worthy of depicting in book form at the Rutgers Prep, this magazine was founded. From the beginning it has always aimed to be the voice of the school and has at all times encouraged that which is good. Every word in this magazine is printed for you, the reader; therefore; it is your magazine and the official organ of the Students' Association of Rutgers Preparatory School.

Football

THE season of 1924 at "Prep" this year, although not so brilliant when one is considering the wins and losses, was a successful one. As school opened on September 22, the new coach, Mr. King, had only one week before the first game was scheduled to be played. Football candidates were called out on September 23, about thirty candidates reporting. Of these thirty men only six had won their letters the previous year, Captain Lowrie, Alden, Grothe, Kuhlthau, Rascovar and O'Flynn. The first few days of practice consisted of drilling in the fundamentals of the sport, and hardening of the muscles of the candidates. Each day as the practice became a little more difficult, the number on the squad diminished until there were about twenty men coming out regularly. As the first game was only a few days off, some hustling had to be done.

The first game of the season was in October, and though battling gamely to the last minute of play, the team went down to defeat by a score of 6-0 before the huskies of St. Peter's Prep, from Jersey City. The game contained very little in the way of spectacular playing, but was featured by hard playing on both sides. As the team went into this game with only four plays for an offence, the showing made was far from discouraging. Several promising players from other schools showed that with a little hard work the team would be a good one.

After going through a week of strenuous practice, the team set out for Garden City to meet the strong St. Paul's School aggregation. The eleven fought gamely and gallantly and had victory within its grasp only to be snatched away by a costly fumble on the St. Paul's School three-foot line. The team outplayed St. Paul's during three quarters of the game only to lose 6-0. After St. Paul's had scored a touchdown in the first quarter, the Prep team came back and outplayed their opponents through the remainder of the game. This game was featured by the defensive work of Rascovar and Behal.

Smarting under the sting of two successive defeats, the team went out and gave all their fight in preparation for the game with Morristown which was held on Wednesday, October 15. In this game the team seemed to find its offensive power for, having had gone through two games without a point, it swept across Morristown's goal line for twenty points and lost another touchdown because of a penalty. The whole team went into the game with a fight that was not to be denied. Lowrie and Reid starred in the defensive while Behal, Alden, and Johnson proved the mainstay of the offense, the kicking of Silloway also featured this game. Several times he kicked the ball offside on opponent's five-yard line.

Because of a Wednesday game, the team had only one real day of practice before the game with Carleton Academy on the following Saturday. Playing first home game of the season, the team showed its backers what kind of stuff they were made of when they trounced Carleton 39-6. In this game the Prep offense seemed to gain at will and from the beginning it was just a question of how many points it would get. For the first time a lot of the substitutes had a chance to show their wares. There were no real individual stars of this game with perhaps the exception of Forman who played a great game on the defensive. His best contribution was a blocked punt and touchdown.

With things seeming a little better the team on the following Monday started out for one of the hardest weeks of practice in preparation for the game with St. Benedict's, one of the best teams in the state. When Saturday finally came around the team went into the field fighting like a group of demons to overcome a great obstacle. The team, playing against a team which outweighed them nearly twenty pounds to the man played in such a manner as to send a chill up the very backbones of the St. Benedict's rooters. Matching fight for brutality the team came out in the first half leading 6-0. This touchdown was made by a brilliant eighty-five-yard run made by Albertson after having intercepted a forward pass and running through the entire Newark aggregation. The game, especially the first half, was marked by the rough tactics of St. Benedict's, who were penalized eighty-five yards during the first half. It was in one of these rough mixups that Pie Alden was carried off the field with a broken leg. After seeing their teammate carried off the field in this manner, the team seemed to fight all the harder only to lose out by one point, 7-6. None too much credit can be given to the team for the brilliant game put up against the more powerful eleven of St. Benedict's.

Due to the hard game of the previous Saturday the team went through a comparatively easy week of practice in preparation for Bordentown. The team, still suffering under the injuries of the St. Benedict's game, went into the game greatly handicapped. Prep, due to its forward passing game came out on top, 13-0. With Johnson doing the throwing and Behal the recovering, no less than sixteen passes out of twenty attempted were successful. Behal made both of the touchdowns on recovering a pass from Johnson. Lowrie and Denham, a new man, played the best game on the defensive for Prep.

On Saturday, November 7, the team set out to play Pingry on the latter's field. Encouraged by the large following, the team came out victorious 13-0, in a very interesting game. After playing through the first half without either team scoring, the Prep team came back with blood in their eyes and crossed the Pingry goal twice. The first touchdown was made by Behal who received a forward pass from Johnson. The second was by Rascovar, a brilliant thirty-five-yard gain by the same player. The whole team played well in the game, but the biggest feature was the defensive work of Roberts at left end. Time after time, this player was breaking through and making tackles.

The following Saturday came the worst exhibition of the season at Princeton. Prep, after holding their opponents to a 7-0 score during the first half, the team seemed to go all to pieces. Princeton seemed to gain at will through the Prep's line and the close of the game saw a disappointed team wind its way into the field house smarting under a 21-0 defeat. The only event of this game that the Prep rooters ever look back upon with satisfaction is the defensive work of Grothe. Battling like a fool, he smeared play after play and also blocked a punt. During his hard playing he received a kick in the mouth, and four teeth were knocked out. At this accident he was taken out of the game much against his will.

Then came the big game of the season with New Brunswick High on November 22. After spending nearly two weeks on practicing new plays, the team's efforts went for naught. When the day of the game came around, it was raining hard, but this game is never postponed. The teams went out on the field and after the first minute of play, looked like helpless individuals wallowing around in a sea of mud. The game was practically made up of a punting duel. With Silloway getting off some of his best punts, the Prep team was gaining a great deal on the exchange of punts. But soon conditions changed, for Silloway was injured early in the second half, and he had to be removed from the game. This left the punting up to Johnson, who could not match Silloway's punting, and therefore the best punting switched over to New Brunswick. The teams battled evenly during the first half, the score being 0-0. At the end of the third quarter the score still remained 0-0, and it seemed as if neither team would score. Early in the fourth quarter, Johnson, who was catching punts for Prep, received a punt on his own twenty-yard line. He started on a wide sweep to his left and with excellent interference by Reed and Kuhlthau, he ran through the entire New Brunswick eleven for a touchdown. The point after touchdown was missed. A few minutes later New Brunswick worked a long forward pass from which they pushed the ball over for six points. They also missed the extra point, thus ending another of the games for the traditional rivals of New Brunswick. Both teams fought hard, and a tie was the best way that a game under such conditions would have ended.

On looking back over the season, we find that the team won four, lost four and tied one, thus ending a fairly successful season. The success of the team is mostly due to this wonderful coaching of Mr. King and we certainly hope to find him back with our team for another year. ## Swimming

WO weeks before Christmas vacation there was a call issued by the manager for swimming candidates. The same afternoon a large number of anxious novices appeared. Captain Grothe and Mark Smith were the only two of last year's letter men to come back.

The loss of Atkinson and Rascovar set the team back quite a bit, but with the coaching of Mr. Reilly, who we were glad to have again, a team consisting of Captain Grothe, M. Smith, B. Smith, Behal, Kahn, and Hamilton was made ready for the first meet which was against Pingry.

This meet did not finish favorably for us, the final score being: Pingry  $37\frac{1}{3}$ , Prep  $15\frac{1}{2}$ , but it gave to our men that which they needed, experience and confidence. The work of Behal was unusually good, for he won first places in the dive and fifty-yard dash.

Our mermen came back with the firm determination of defeating Plainfield in the college pool. Plainfield had learned of Atkinson and Rascovar's leaving school, and they arrived here quite certain that they would return home with the bacon, or rather the fish. However, much to their surprise, Grothe took first place in the breaststroke; Behal first in the 50-yard dash, and second in the dive; Hamilton beat his opponents out for a first place in the century; and Kahn came through in the killer, or the 200-yard swim. The best event of the day was the relay which ended in a dead heat and consequently had to be swum over. The swimmers were allowed three minutes before re-swimming the race, and at the end of that time they appeared looking fairly well rested. Hamilton took his place at the edge of the pool and left at the fire of the pistol to return with a yard to his advantage. B. Smith, a novice, proved his worth by taking the lead and finishing five yards ahead of his opponent. Kahn, the third swimmer, added a yard to Smith's gain to give to Behal. Behal, the anchor man, took this lead, but he was not satisfied until he had added a few more yards, and finally finished with at least a quarter of the pool to his advantage.

The team had their first taste of victory, and hoped for another when they met McBurney, at New York, a few weeks later. The latter boys proved to be too fast for us, and we were only successful in two events. Kahn, who has improved splendidly under the guidance of Mr. Reilly, won the 200-yard swim; and Captain Grothe who has been under Mr. Reilly's watchful eye, proved his unquestionable ability by bringing back to "Prep" the long-unbroken breast-stroke record of the 57th Street, Y. M. C. A. pool.

All in all, the team did well, considering that only two of last year's men returned. Much credit is due to the novices, and with the nucleus which has been found, the team of next year should go through without a defeat.

In behalf of the swimmers and students, I wish to thank Mr. Reilly for the time, trouble and splendid work he spent in coaching our swimmers.

Basketball

WHEN Coach King issued his call for candidates, about twenty men responded. After Christmas vacation the real grind started. Manager Donnelly arranged a stiff schedule with such teams as St. Benedicts, this year's runners-up for the state championship, Bordentown, George School, and schools of like strength. With but a week's practice, the team traveled to George School in Pennsylvania. Although the maroon and white played a hard game, they were outclassed by this fast quintet. Not discouraged by this loss, the squad practiced faithfully, day in and day out. Several defeats followed, but the boys stuck firmly to it. The team played a great game against Bordentown Military Institute. Although hopelessly outclassed in the first half "Prep" came back to do or to die in the second half. Steadily cutting the lead, the "Prep" dribblers threw a scare into last year's runners-up for the state championship. During the whirlwind attack four baskets were scored in the last five minutes of play. But as luck goes, the whistle staved off defeat for the soldier boys, who were on the long end of a 30-28 score. The season ended with a decisive victory over the Pingry passers.

Although a few more games won would have made the season seem more successful, the team and school as well, were not dissatisfied. With twenty fully uniformed players, there was keen competition for every position on the team.

The "Prep" mentor had such faith in his understudies that he was able to start any combination. Those who were considered on the first team were: Lowrie, Johnson, Parrish, Stryker, Pfeiffer, Zacchino, and Walker. The equally successful second team, who broke even in their schedule, were: Forman, Robinson Capps, Eisenmann, Peck and Fields.

Baseball

HE outlook for baseball this year is exceptionally promising, owing to the wealth of veterans who are on hand. This fact, together with a hard schedule of 17 games, puts the stage in readiness for a banner season.

The pitching position, which in Prep School ball goes to make up nearly one-half the team, has several good candidates, foremost among whom are Hochheiser, former South Amboy star, and Dick Johnson. Hochheiser has to his credit four years of baseball with South Amboy High, the last two years of which were spent in the box. In these two years he gained an enviable reputation for himself by winning the majority of his games. His last year there he won ten out of fifteen games, several of which were extra inning affairs in which he annexed a large number of strikeouts. Johnson, too, has done great work in the box, having pitched for Winthrop High School for four years. He also had a big Senior year, pitching twelve games and suffering only one setback, this a "tough-luck encounter" to the strong Lynn Classical nine.

Stu Silloway is another of the pitching candidates. Although he played ball for Newburyport High three years, only his last year was spent in the box. Last year he pitched the majority of his team's games and he should prove a big factor in the box this year. When he is not pitching it is expected that he will play in the field, for he is a good man with the bat, having had an average of .385 last year.

The backstop position has caused Coach King a great deal of thought as no veterans have reported. It is thought, however, that Captain Albizu, star of the 1924 team, will fill this position. "Al" is a hard hitting, aggressive ball player, and he possesses a wonderful arm; and although this arm is his left, he overcomes the handicap very well, and at present seems to be outdistancing all other candidates for the position. Prominent among those are Dave Lowrie and Jim Donnelly, both of whom caught several games last year. Both of these last men are good workers and are battling hard for the position.

George Hamilton seems to have the edge over all other candidates for first. This big boy seems to handle himself well around the sack and looks very promising. However, he is not having things his own way as Parrish and Kline are both showing up well. The outcome of the battle for this position will not be decided till the last minute. As for the rest of the infield it is hard to say much about it at present, because of the number of experienced men trying for these positions. The shortstop position will probably go to Joe Walker, former Dickinson High player. Although Joe did not play the infield last year, he handles himself like a veteran, and Coach King seems well pleased with him. Other infielders who are likely to play are: Roberts, Kuhlthau, Behal, and Rannizizi.

The prospects for an unusually good outfield, like those for the infield, are extremely bright. Foremost among those fighting for the three berths are Katterman and Stryker, two veterans. These men both played good ball last year and are expected to come through in fine style this season. Others who look promising to Coach King are: Eisenman and Robinson. Both of these men are hard workers and may be heard from later.

Taken as a whole, the material shapes up well and no doubt other members of the large squad will show more promise later. The men are practicing daily in the park and look to get under way to a good start.

AMONG the theatregoers of the second grade this month were: Alys Ziegler, who saw "Rose Marie" and Virginia White, "Topsy and Eva."

The night of the Girl Scout Rally, February 28, the junior branch, known as "The Brownies" gave a little play called "The Making of An Golden Eaglet." Among those who took part were: Ann Van Cleef, Martha Rutgers, Virginia White, Mary Cowenhoven, Anna Bearman, Betty Pettit, Janice Wilson, and Sally McKeag.

The third grade has been keeping ears and eyes open for the first birds of spring. In the last week, four flocks of birds, several blue jays, and three blue birds have been seen.

George and Molly LaMonte went to New York to bid Becky a last farewell as she sailed with her mother for England, February 28.

Betty Pettit of the fourth grade, delightfully entertained twelve of her friends at a luncheon, March 7, in honor of her ninth birthday.

The fourth grade is happy to have with them again Jean Watson, Margaret Farley, and Billy Beardslee, whose illness kept them at home since the Christmas holidays.

Janet Bardin enjoyed seeing the operetta "Natja" in New York last Saturday. Sydney Chrysler and Richard Nebel also have been theatre visitors in the city.

Betty Streitwolf gave a Washington's Birthday party at Ringel's, where she entertained six of her schoolmates and friends.

On Monday, March 9, the upper school assembled at 12:15 to hear a lively debate between two eighth grade teams. The question was: Resolved: that the Child Labor Amendment should be adopted. The affirmative side was upheld by Billy Waters, Bartley Howley, and Dorothy Lippincott; the negative by Russell Watson, Jr., Mary Warne and Kathryn Hull. Constant Watrous introduced the speakers in a very able, poised way. Both sides presented their arguments well, the one upholding the judgment of Congress in establishing adequate child labor laws and the other advocating all power to the states. The rebuttal was presented by one representative from each side. The judges awarded a unanimous palm to the affirmative side because they felt there was better substantiation of statistics and a little more poise and fluency on that side. All the speakers deserve credit for exploring this unknown field.

On Friday, March 6, Billy Walters gave an "inaugural" ball at his new home on College avenue, which was heartily enjoyed by Betty Ross, Mary Warne, Nancy Serviss, Anne Gutmann, Margaret Loblein, Russell Watson, Jr., Malcolm Watson, Eldon Loblein, Norman Forney, Edwin and Jay Murray.

A Soldier With Braddock

WAS a soldier with Braddock in the Fort Duquesne campaign. When we fought the French near the fort, we would have won surely if only General Braddock had listened to George Washington. As it was, we lost the day.

"I knew we should have fought Indian fashion, and it came over me that we should not have worn red uniforms, either.

"Poor Braddock! I felt sorry for him, but then it served him right. He should have done as Washington said. But then he cannot lose any more fights; that is one good thing.

"You should have seen the bullets whizz by. The volleys were so great in number that they looked like flocks of birds flying over our heads. I was yelling to another man; then I heard a bang and found myself on the ground. My horse had been shot and, giving a jump, he sent me flying. And what bullet had it been but the one that had just come through Washington's coat! And Washington had two horses shot under him that day.

"Well that war is over, but we shall win the next one. So do not forget to cheer especially loudly for me.

"I forgot to say that I killed an Indian and wounded a Frenchman's horse."

KATHERINE GREACEN,
Seventh Grade.

FEBRUARY 16—We were brought down to earth somewhat sharply from the uplift of our morning's chapel exercises by Mr. Kelly's announcement that a chair had been broken in the math room, and it was his desire to know who was the culprit. No one was heard to say "mea culpa."

FEBRUARY 18—Cheering practice and the announcement of a Students' Meeting for Friday.

FEBRUARY 19—The usual routine brightened by the rehearsal of songs by the entire student body in preparation for Alumni Day.

FEBRUARY 20—Students' Meeting. The attendance was so small that a roll was called to discover the absentees. Having thus ascertained who the students were who showed so little interest in the affairs of the school, some time was consumed in discussing what should be the proper punishment. It was decided to lay aside the discussion until the next meeting, and use the time in practicing the songs for Alumni Day, then very near at hand.

FEBRUARY 23—This was our Washington's Birthday celebration with Dr. Cook, the interesting orator of the day. His address was brief, but left us each a better patriot for having heard it.

FEBRUARY 24—This morning Dr. Cook and Coach King, while addressing us on our basketball game with High School, gave us the credit of backing our team well.

FEBRUARY 25—Regular Meeting of the Students' Association. The fellows who had missed the previous meeting were very anxious to present their excuses if they had any. President Johnson appointed a committee to determine what punishment should be meted out to meeting "hoppers." Mr. Peck gave an interesting account of what the dance committee had accomplished.

MARCH 3—We had a few minutes of cheering practice to put us in proper spirit for the afternoon game with St. Benedicts.

MARCH 4—We were happy to welcome Mr. Kelly back, and to hear from him all about the inauguration of President Coolidge, which he attended with Mrs. Kelly. They enjoyed the inaugural address, found the parade inspiring and they also had the wonderful privilege of seeing that precious document in the original—The Declaration of Independence.

MARCH 6—This day is memorable because of our double victory over Pingry—in the afternoon, on the court of our gymnasium, and in the realm of oratory in the evening, when the debators of both schools discussed the question of the child labor amendment in our school building. There was a large and interested audience, who gave concentrated attention. Both sides made a strong showing, and there was a tense excitement while the judges were considering their decisions. When Mr. Kelly announced that the negative side, upheld by Prep School had won, there was wild enthusiasm expressed in roaring cheers. It was a happy group of fellows who marched out to the strains of the school orchestra, which had previously entertained us at different intervals during the evening by their fine rendering of a delightful program.

Literature and Life

The Firebrand

HIS new play by Edwin Justus Mayer, starring Joseph Schildkraut, has met with instantaneous success in New York City. The theme revolves around the historical character, "Benvenuto Cellini," who is in love with his model "Angela." Benvenuto displeases the Duke of Florence and is condemned to die, but the Duke's wife saves him upon his promise to become her lover. The Duke of Florence falls in love with Angela, and the ensuing scenes of the parted lovers are filled with comedy. Finally Cellini leaves the Dutchess, and Angela comes back to him, but he will have nothing to do with her, claiming that all women are alike, and are nuisances, anyhow, so Angela returns to the Duke.

The entire story is a well worked out theme and the comedy is excellent. Mr. Mayer is to be congratulated on his masterful method of handling "The Firebrand."

The Best British Short Stories of 1924

When one has finished this book, he is ready to agree with the editor, O'Brien, who says in the introduction that it is a rare year that gives us a great short story. Too many of these selections are merely elegant trifles. For the average boy of seventeen or eighteen some of the short stories will seem weak and maudlin; others, because of the very dry English humor probably will appear flat or stale. One, "The Samuel Josephs," which attempts to represent the life and talk of young children, succeeds so realistically that it is silly in any one's else opinion.

However, if a boy will accept Mr. O'Brien's high artistic standard, he will find much enjoyment in some of the other narrations. "The Higgler," the longest story in the book, is excellently written, and gives one a surprise at the close which is reminiscent of O'Henry. There are three good character studies by William McFee, Archibald Marshall, and the popular dramatist, Somerset Maugham. "Bill Grimes, His Soul," gives a picture of a man, who greatly resembles John Silver, as he will appear in the next world. Outside of the stories noted and "Lion's Courage," there remain few which are above the ordinary.

The Golden Book

This is another collection of famous stories in the form of a new magazine, which differs from the type generally read by preparatory school students in two ways: it publishes only stories by great writers; and it publishes real classics from writers as varied as Joseph Conrad, Don Marquis, Merimee, Mary E. Wilkins, and Oliver Wendell Holmes. It comes out monthly, and, strange to relate, the titles of the short stories are generally new to most readers although by famous authors.

I'LL BE DAMNED!

Although a judge can only say,
"You be hanged," while a bishop can say, "You be damned," yet the fact remains that when a judge says
you be hanged, you will be hanged.
—Dartmouth Jack O'Lantern.
