

Classes Choose Various Officers; Torrey New Senior Class Leader

The annual elections for class officers were held on October 1. As is customary, each class elected three officers with the exception of the freshman class, which only chose two.

John Torrey, an unsuccessful candidate for Student Council president last spring, was elected president of the Senior class. The class chose Nancy Tomkinson as vice-president, and Jim Dunn, who ran for all three offices, was finally elected secretary-treasurer.

The Junior class elected three equally capable officers. Larry Deiner will lead his class with assistance from Richard Schatzman, vice-president, and Marian Kellogg, secretary-treasurer.

Richard Patt was elected Sophomore executive while Jean Kramer and Rickey Kolbay were given vice-presidential and secretarial duties, respectively.

Officials Dedicate Building Erected On Elm Farm Campus

On September 22nd at the Elm Farm Campus, the new Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Building was dedicated. Not only were high officials of the Colgate Company and our faculty there, but also many officials of Rutgers University and New Brunswick. This affair, which took place in the late morning, was preceded by a full course luncheon held on the spacious lawn in front of the Lower School Building.

Officials Present

The ceremony was continued following the luncheon. Many officials addressed the assembled group. Dr. Mason Gross and four of the Colgate officials were among the speakers. Besides these speeches, there was a tour of the laboratory facilities of the new building.

The new Palmolive Building will be a temporary research center for Colgate before it moves to the multi-million-dollar Rutgers University building in Piscataway Township. In this building, scientists are studying human skin. They are interested in the variations of skin from one race to another. They will also delve into those parts of the human body which are derived from the skin, that is, nails, and hair. When this move takes place, the building will be sold to Rutgers Prep and taken over by our Upper School, replacing the present Somerset Street building.

Student Body Adds Four Clubs

Four new clubs have been added to the list of activities at Prep this year. These include the Creative Writing Club and the Jazz Club, which are both under the direction of Mr. Lasser; the German Club, whose advisor is Mrs. Rooda; and the Philosophy Seminar, which has been organized by Mr. Paskin.

The Creative Writing Club gives its members a chance to develop their writing techniques. By working in close association with the school publications, Mr. Lasser hopes to produce material for the Argomag and to guide the members in journalistic style which would benefit the Argo. Most of the writing will be done at home, leaving the meetings open for discussion and criticism. The tentative program also includes lectures by professional writers.

Jazz Club Huge Success

The Jazz Club has already become one of the most popular clubs at Prep. So many students flocked to its first meeting that Mr. Lasser was forced to divide it into two sections, a freshman-sophomore group meeting Tuesdays and a junior-senior group on Fridays. Both groups will trace the history of American jazz chronologically from the early reels and spirituals, to the working songs, to the Blues, and finally to jazz. The group also plans to join a national jazz organization.

Mrs. Rooda's German Club is open to all students currently taking the second or third year of German. The members are required to speak only German at all meetings, and anyone speaking English will have to pay a penny fine. The club has a varied and interesting program, including further study of German literature and music, a trip to a German opera, and, if possible, a visit to the Bach festival held each year in Pennsylvania. The club has elected two officers: Paul Gottlieb, president, and Henry Gurshman, vice president-secretary.

Mr. Paskin Guides Philosophy Group

The Philosophy Seminar, which has been limited to juniors and seniors, deals with three main aspects of philosophy: its nature, its history, and its contemporary issues. The club will include lectures and discussions, in which everyone will be encouraged to participate. The members are working from two books which offer a basis for their discussions. The club, which meets on Friday, will devote part of its program to the philosophy of science and the philosophy of history. Under Mr. Paskin's able direction, the club should become both interesting and provocative.

Council Authorizes Handbook Revisions

Although the new Student Council is still in its early weeks, it has already taken action on a matter of great importance to the faculty and the students alike. This is the revision of the student handbook. Because of the eighth-grade shift to the Elm Farm Campus, the present handbook is inadequate.

On October 3, the council chose a committee of six students to make additions and corrections to the present handbook and then to submit their new edition to the council. This committee includes two members of the Key Club, Peter Wintersteiner, chairman of the committee, and Elizabeth Kady, and four members of the council, John Torrey, Nancy Tomkinson, Susanna Margolis, and Bruce Miller.

Faculty Approves Changes

Three changes have already been approved by the faculty. These involve fire drill and library regulations, revision in the list of clubs,

Choral Leader Trains Club For Yuletide Performance

To help usher in the Yuletide Season, Rutgers Prep gives a holiday concert for the entertainment of the faculty, the students and their families, and their friends. This concert has become an annual affair.

In October, however, Christmas seems a long way off except for those who belong to the school Glee Club.

Secretaries Divide Duties

The program this year will consist of the well-known "We Wish You a Merry Christmas," as well as other selections. The job of sorting out the music has been given to secretaries Ballard Jacobson and Tiffany Hendry.

This is the first year for our director, Mrs. Brigden. In the short time the Glee Club has been meeting, she has done an excellent job of organizing the group. Under her direction, this year's program will be one that should not be missed by anyone.

and certain changes in the school constitution. Because an eighth-grade delegate to the council can no longer be elected by the school, a change must be made in the number of council members. Another question is whether seniors should be allowed to vote in the school elections.

When all issues have been voted on, the publication group will release a new handbook.

RICK'S RAMBLINGS

Progress and Progressives

by Richard Kluff

Beatnik- what does the thrice-cursed word mean? Is it synonymous with unkempt? Does it refer to any unusual or lazy person, or is there perhaps a philosophy or a way of life lurking beneath navel-length beards? The answer, paradoxically enough, is yes, to both parts of the question.

Beat is often applied as an adjective to a certain uncouth element, merely because, at this period, the word "beat," or for that matter, the word "teen-ager," is a handy way to label an element not widely understood or accepted by the bulk of society. The answer to the question's second part is bound up in an unmanifest manifesto neglected by the majority of the beats, to whom the whole movement is merely a new way to be disreputable. If a new group were to spring up amidst adverse publicity, these fakers would switch to it, even if its theme were gourami breeding. The true beat, the spawn of the Depression and the Second World War, is befuddled by the world at large, so he withdraws into his own coterie and waits for life to give him a better break. He sees the world as a pretty miserable place and has given up all attempts at self-improvement as a lost cause. After meeting some of these quaint folks, I must agree with them on one point—that they are hopeless.

Many so-called beats are writing at quite a rate, hoping that someone, somewhere, will heed their messages. The messages, however, are so obscure that the reader cannot glean a meaning, save exaltation in obscenity, and eventually concludes that their authors couldn't either. If they are not obscure, they are usually too trite to be worth the time needed to decipher them. The beatniks, nevertheless, will meander onward at their peculiar retrogressive pace (as does the Raritan River, which is polluted) until their places are taken by yet another dubious band in that never-ending chain called progress(?).

OFFICE NEWS

Any student who has been in the office lately has certainly noticed a big change in its appearance.

There are now two main rooms: the secretaries' office and that of Dr. Heinlein. Further changes will be made which will not only enlarge the office and make it easier to move around in, but will also make things much simpler and more convenient for Dr. Heinlein, as well as for both secretaries.

Another change is the installment of a much-needed pay telephone, in the side entrance. Mrs. Parkins, our full time bookkeeper, and Mrs. Ward will no longer be bothered by lines of students who insist they "must" use their telephones.

Mr. Shelley will open a new store, two houses away from his present one. This is for our convenience, as well as his, because it will contain Prep school books, stationery, pens, paper, and other material mainly for us, and it will be close enough to operate as an annex to the store.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

What has happened to our school spirit? Has it become fashionable not to be seen at soccer games? Even when the weather is perfect for soccer, very few of our students "sacrifice" an afternoon to lend moral support to our often-defeated team. There are usually more faculty members and outsiders present than students. Where are the Preppers? Why have a cheerleading squad if no one will cheer with it?

Help the Cheerleaders

The cheerleaders alone cannot back up the team. Even they need moral support. Do your good deed for the season and come to a soccer game. You might like it so much you will want to come again. But don't come too often. You might begin to enjoy it.

Yours truly,

Minda Hamelsky

FLASH!

Last Friday evening the annual hayride took place, and was a success. Thanks are due to Mr. Maurice Aaron and Mr. Samuel Hamelsky, who lent trucks for the affair.

Dear Editor,

During my years at Prep, I have been impressed by the emphasis laid upon its history. Now the future comes into focus as Prep nears its new location.

Within a few years the historic Rutgers Prep will no longer be situated in New Brunswick, but rather on a 35-acre campus on Easton Avenue. The original building already houses the lower grades, and the new Colgate-Palmolive research laboratory will provide a magnificent home for Prep.

Suggests ARGO Coverage

Since this campus is to be the future site of the school, it is my opinion that we should learn more about it. I recommend a column in the Argo especially devoted to the history of the Elm Farm Campus and to the current program. This would familiarize us with our new location "on the banks of the old Raritan."

Respectfully yours,
Carol Heinlein

College Entrance Grows More Difficult

by Richard Patt

Are you planning to attend college when you graduate from Prep? If you are, it would be interesting, and also disheartening, to note that this year only 25% of our college-eligible youth is actually attending a college or university. It is true that in past years Prep has been successful in getting its graduates into college, but this may not always be the case. Every year, college entrance becomes more difficult.

In 1957, twenty-two states passed acts appropriating more money for higher education. Tomorrow, New Jersey citizens will have a chance to pass a $66,800,000 college bond referendum. This issue is extremely important for many reasons. Today, New Jersey high school students have less chance of being accepted in college than students in most other states. In a few years, this situation will be even worse if aid is not given to our colleges. This act will provide many badly needed facilities, such as scientific and engineering laboratories, dormitories, classrooms, and libraries. These facilities are needed to keep pace with the state's growing population. Though out-of-state colleges will benefit from this increase in money, their populations will also be growing, so that New Jersey will have to provide for most of its own students. In 1965, private colleges will be able to enroll about half of these students, leaving approximately 27,000 to be accommodated by state-supported colleges.

Editorially Speaking

Editor Views Issue Of Seniors' Voting

At this writing, the Student Council is debating the acceptance of a proposed revision in the school constitution prepared by a special committee and already approved by the faculty. One much-discussed clause in the revision would give seniors the right to vote in the Spring Student Council Officer elections.

This would be a very logical move. The seniors, having been here longer than any other group, are most familiar with the procedures and workings of the school. They are best acquainted with the problems that arise and with the people who must be chosen to solve them. Does it not seem foolish to deny a voice to the students best informed and qualified to give a knowing opinion?

Impossible to Work on Principle Alone

Some contend that it would be against ordinary principles to allow an unrepresented group to vote. In a school like this, the Student Council could not possibly run the student body merely on principle, which in this case it should sacrifice for the sake of expediency. If it were to work purely doctrinarily, the present eighth grade, which as a freshman class will be under the authority of the candidates chosen this Spring, should vote along with the present ninth, tenth, and eleventh grades. This is an arrangement which would be not only impractical but also totally unfair to the students in the upper school, so much better qualified to express an opinion.

It is interesting to note that the President of Princeton University, Robert Goheen, has shown strong support for this referendum, even though Princeton will not directly benefit from it. He feels that a good citizen should be interested not only in his own education, but also in the education of others.

Mason Gross, President of Rutgers University, who is another advocate of this referendum, is reported to have said that New Jersey is becoming a "cultural desert." Let's not allow this to happen! Urge your parents to vote YES on the college bond issue.

False Accusations

I have heard students accuse seniors in general of lacking the responsibility and interest to elect the proper persons to council offices, since they will not be back to suffer the consequences of intentional poor choices. For every senior who would try to make such a farce and mockery of a serious election, there are two dozen others to whom such action would never occur, a thing not necessarily so in the lower classes where a candidate's close friends or enemies could materially help or hurt his cause.

Douglas Arbiter copped the top laurels in the Freshman class, and Sue Wintersteiner was selected first-mate by her fellow classmates. No secretary-treasurer was chosen.

Beside the council officers, Torrey and Tomkinson will represent the seniors on the council; Deiner and Schatzman will speak for the juniors; Patt will watch the sophomores' interests; and Arbiter is the lone Freshman delegate.

Capability Overrides Popularity

Previous to the elections, Mr. Holley warned the classes not to let friendship interfere with their choice of officers. He pointed out how often students will forget that the elections are serious issues and should not be taken as popularity contests. The classes elected officers, some of which will represent them in the Student Council. Mr. Holley seems to have stressed this point well enough, for all the classes chose capable leaders.

ELECTIONS, R.P.S.

Amsterdam Quintet Assists Fund Drive

On the evening of September 23rd, the Amsterdam Woodwind Quintet presented a concert in the Rutgers Prep Gym. The concert was sponsored by the Parents' Association.

The Prep school was very fortunate in obtaining the services of these talented young Dutch students. After completing their engagement in the Netherlands Pavillion of the Brussels World Fair last year, they were chosen to entertain a returning group of American exchange students. They sailed here with these students and soon they will be going back to Holland with another group of American students. After arriving here, they met Mrs. Rooda, who arranged this concert.

Variety of Instruments

The five participants were Martientje Bakker, playing the flute; Edo de Waart, the oboe; George Pieterse, the clarinet; Jaap Verhaar, the French horn; and Joep Terwey, the bassoon. The five selections were Mozart's Divertimento No. 13, Vivaldi's Concerto in G Minor, Cinq Pièces en Trio by Jacques Ibert, Au Pays de Vendanges by Vredenburg, and Hindemith's Kleine Kammermusik für fünf Bläser, Op. 24 No. 2. The Au Pays de Vendanges was the most popular number.

Remember . . .

Mrs. George Kellogg will sponsor a piano concert by Vivien Harvey, to be held on November 13 in the Voorhees Chapel. The proceeds will go toward the Willem Rudolphs Jr. Memorial Library Fund, as did those of the Woodwind Quintet's performance.

O Tempora; O Mores!

by Richard Kluff

In one of their more recent excursions into the world of decent intent, the newspapermen of the world have leaped to the defense of a much maligned British minority group, which, in its own unique fashion, has slowly risen to the rank of the most persecuted unit in "Merrie England". I refer, of course, to the Coldstream Guard of Buckingham Palace.

Over the years, taunting these men has become a routine for practically every traveling ex-trovert, a veritable "must" for the tourist abroad. Recent signs indicate that the irate guardsmen are taking retaliatory measures. This should come as no shock, for in the last 18 months, the British populace has witnessed these outrages, among others, inflicted upon its soldiers: no less than a dozen actresses have tried to fluster the guards by marching at their sides in bikinis, by siccing poodles upon them, and, as a last resort, by embracing them as they stand at attention. Small boys delight in kicking the guards; young girls attach sticky lollipops to their bearskin hats and red coats. Other kind souls attach tin cans to the beleaguered soldiers' belts or try to knock off their ornate hats with assorted citrus fruits (often well-aged). A recent American good-will ambassador, so it is told, lodged three bananas on one of the guardsmen's bayonets. This, one might suppose, is the best practical example of the vaunted "Yankee ingenuity."

However, three medals are in order for the men who wearily pound the Windsor Castle-Buckingham Palace beat. I propose a bronze award to the anonymous guard who, upon executing an about-face, found his rifle butt jammed into the face of an 8-year-old boy who had been mimicking him a few inches to his rear. I designate Charles Foot to be the recipient of a silver medal. Charles Foot's pants ripped while he was on duty. A group of tourists gathered to deride the poor fellow, and CP reports that not one person in that crowd had the decency to inform the Captain of the Guard and to end Foot's ordeal. I designate a gold award to Victor Footer, who was sentenced to ten days in the guard-house. A young woman pestered him throughout his entire period of duty and managed to pluck some feathers from his hat, whereupon Footer, true to his name, administered a well-deserved and well-placed kick. I, personally, deem his conduct inexcusable. He should have kicked her twice.

Nuclear Scientist To Teach Classes

This week, Mr. Matt F. Kashuba, a traveling teacher from Oak Ridge, Tenn., will spend a week at Prep. He is one of a group of teachers especially trained in the field of science and will present a series of lectures accompanied by experiments for our science classes.

Mr. Kashuba has been touring schools throughout the United States representing the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies under the joint sponsorship of the National Science Foundation and the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. The demonstration-lecture program is an effort to stimulate student interest in science.

Mr. Kashuba will bring all the equipment necessary for various experiments, which are for the classes' interest and gain in knowledge of various aspects of science. We are sure that this visit will be enthusiastically welcomed.

STUDENT COUNCIL REPORT

by Barty Levay

Since the six newly-elected class officers attended their first Student Council meeting on Oct. 2, much business has been attended to. That day, considerable discussion took place concerning matters which were to materialize greatly and draw most of the Council's attention in the ensuing weeks.

Primarily, in view of several outdated clauses in the school constitution, the question of revision was brought up. This task was begun by a student committee headed by Peter Wintersteiner on Oct. 16. Not until two weeks later were all the new provisions approved by the Council. One expected change, giving the outgoing seniors the right to vote in the Spring elections, caused some very spirited arguments, with Vice-President Jim Smith leading his opponents against a host of supporters.

Secondly, Paul Gottlieb was appointed chairman of the hayride committee. Also, discussion about Bruce Miller's projected dance club resulted in the formation of a group to draft a charter, which was submitted and approved on Oct. 22.

Still another item on that day's agenda was the Council Budget. As we go to press, Treasurer Susy Margolis' proposals were being audited by Gottlieb and by Nancy Tomkinson. It appears that there will be money left over for miscellaneous expenses and other things not especially stipulated in the budget, even after the usual and necessary functions are provided for.

Classes See Gielgud In Comedy

Sir John Gielgud's performance in Shakespeare's comedy, Much Ado About Nothing, provided an interesting afternoon for about fifty Prep students on October 21. Mr. Lasser, who organized the trip, the entire sophomore class, plus Mr. Dumarac and his eight advanced-literature students, made the afternoon excursion to New York.

Group Acclaims Performance

Sir John, playing his favorite part, that of Benedict, drew much praise from the group. Moreover, most of the students felt that the entire cast did a fine job in accenting the humorous portions of the play. Shakespeare's ready wit and general lightness helped to augment the comical incidents created within the complicated but well-molded plot.

On November 19, Gielgud will appear at Princeton in The Ages of Man.

Elm Farm Campus

Last year, Mrs. Dixon's seventh grade made a contribution of forty-one dollars to CARE from the class treasury. They recently received a letter that expressed the deepest gratitude of that organization and reported that the money sent nine hundred and two pounds of food to Hong Kong, India, Haiti, and Greece.

Mrs. Dixon has sponsored a student workshop which meets on Thursday. The sessions are in modern dancing and arts and crafts.

Mrs. Taylor's seventh grade elected class officers. Jean Howley is president and Barbara Kramer is vice-president.

The seventh and eighth grades have a basketball team coached by Mr. Dickinson and Mr. O'Connell. The team will play other local seventh and eighth grade teams this year.

Mr. Paskin's eighth grade science classes are emphasizing chemistry.

IN THIS CORNER

by Paul Gottlieb

When boys participate in any team sport, they must practice fundamentals constantly and learn the rules of the game. Under playing conditions, however, these tools are useless if the player does not possess a strong and decisive will to get the ball for his team. This killer instinct is inborn, not something that is pounded into players like fundamentals or rules. When this instinct is present and active, athletes fight harder for the ball and exhibit a keen will to win. This fighting does not involve unfair play, unnecessary roughness, or personal fouls. On the contrary, players should always be gentlemen on the playing field. The killer instinct is exhibited only by decisive moves with no hesitation when plays involve contact and coolness of thought.

This instinct lies dormant within many of our soccer players. They practice hard and do their best, but this extra drive, this killer instinct, is not displayed. There will come a time, however, when enough desire to win builds up within to enable this inborn trait to break loose. When this happens, Lord help their opponents!!!

Bartley Howley, a former student of Rutgers Prep, is now attending school at the Hun School in Princeton, New Jersey. Bart, a big boy, is playing guard on the Varsity football team, and is doing very well at it. Congratulations, Bart!!!

Prep Booters Battle To 1 - 1 Draw With Pennington Eleven

Under cloudy skies, our soccer team met Pennington Prep's team on October 7th at Buchleuh Park. The teams played to a 1-1 tie.

After two and a half minutes of play, all the scoring had been accomplished. The visitors' Zeke Crespo booted the ball past goalie Dick Mulligan before a minute had elapsed. Shortly thereafter, Paul Gottlieb maneuvered the defense out of position and, with an assist from Roy Neimark, slammed the ball into the nets for Prep's first goal of the season. Although each team brought the ball deep into offensive territory several times, and although several shots were blocked by both goalies, neither side was able to score from that point on.

Secret to Success

Coach O'Connell's strategy of moving Gottlieb from his halfback slot to the forward line not only paid off with the goal, but also gave freshman Derick Proctor a chance to play an outstanding defensive game at right half. Other defensive stalwarts were full-backs Bob Carlon and Austin Anderson, center half-back Arthur Greenwald, and goalie Mulligan.

Pete lofts one! Proctor, Gottlieb, Greenwald, and Wintersteiner in Pennington Game, Oct. 7.

Fullback Bob Carlon and opponent.

Disappointment

Prepsters Lose To Wardlaw 6-1

A spirited Wardlaw squad routed the Prep soccer team, 6-1, scoring in all four periods. Paul Gottlieb, center forward, scored the goal, his fourth of the season, early in the game. Garry Taylor, Richard Dorrley and Bob Dorrley accounted for Wardlaw's tallies, with 3, 2, and 1 goals respectively.

Wardlaw scored first in the game as Taylor dropped in a shot, but Prep countered with Gottlieb's point, and the score was tied. Wardlaw next counted a pair in the second period and dunked another three after the half-time interval, tallying once in the third period and twice during the fourth. Despite the unequal score, Prep played quite well, although there was a brisk wind hampering the movements and coordination of both teams. The "Little Scarlet" dominated the play during the second quarter, and the team enjoyed numerous scoring opportunities, all of which, however, failed to materialize. Luck was with Wardlaw on two of the goals.

Several Prepsters Play Well

Among the Prep players beside Gottlieb who turned in a fine game were Dick Mulligan, goalie, who amassed some 11 saves, Art Greenwald, who played a top defensive game, and Austin Andersen and Jim Smith, who both, by dint of their long-range kicking, repulsed Wardlaw thrusts. Pete Wintersteiner and Martin Camins who, along with Gottlieb, formed the Prep offensive unit, gave good account of themselves.

Poor teamwork, perhaps, caused the failure to tally more goals, since Prep players were often in the wrong places at the wrong time. Confusion, especially during offensive maneuvers, was obvious, unremedied, and plentiful.

A poor turnout was greeted, on the other hand, by poor teamwork and a "Little Scarlet" loss, the fifth of the season.

Director Announces 1959-60 Gym Season

"We are looking forward to the most active physical education and athletic program this winter since Rutgers Prep was a boarding school," stated Mr. Richard O'Connell, the Director of Physical Education at Prep. Mr. O'Connell also commented favorably on the interscholastic soccer competition, the intramural touch football and basketball for the boys, and the volley ball matches enjoyed by the girls.

Big Plans

Highlighting the winter program will be Varsity, Junior Varsity, and Seventh and Eighth grade basketball interscholastic competition for boys, and a Varsity swimming team for boys with six meets scheduled to date. Boys not participating in the scheduled events will take part in intramural basketball or recreational swimming.

For Girls, Too!

The winter program for girls will include swimming, basketball, informal games, and swim meets and basketball games scheduled with other schools. The Director also said that Rutgers Prep School is joining The Independent School Athletic Association for Girls which will further promote interscholastic competition in such sports as field hockey, swimming, basketball and softball.

Mr. O'Connell further said that the Physical Education Department hopes to be able to offer a team sport for every student during each of the three seasons by the time the entire school is located on the Elm Farm Campus.

Tomkinson Sets Standards For Cheerleaders

In the first week of school, the cheerleading captain, Nancy Tomkinson, chose this year's squad from fifteen enthusiastic candidates. These cheerleaders, consisting of two girls from each class, are Nancy Tomkinson, Suzanne Hancox, Minda Hamelsky, Sue Gunkle, Connie Hess, Barbara Abernethy, Sue Wintersteiner, and Amy Levowitz.

Each cheerleader is required to do a cartwheel and a split so that the squad may incorporate these and other skills into a variety of new cheers. These cheers are practiced at least twice a week at the gym and the school.

For the first time, the uniforms are the cheerleaders' personal property. They are pleated maroon skirts and white sweaters, which boast Prep "R's."
