New Courses Introduced For Next Semester

With the advent of a larger student body, along with greater diversified interests among the students, the administration, together with the academic advisory committee, has decided to institute a number of new courses for the fall term of 1973. These courses will try to fill a need for more liberal and, most importantly, a "relative" education for the students.

The success of current computer programming courses has promoted the expansion of our rapidly growing computer network by introducing "Obscene Computer Language". Taught by Mr. McVeigh, this honors course will set high goals for the advanced computer student who desires to master any machine while grossing out his friends.

Another welcome addition to next years' curriculum will be entitled "Ancient and Medieval Spitballs". Mr. Bianchi, who has fought very hard for this course, will teach it. He has set out to study and explore the origin and past development of the now widely used and famous spitball. In order to enhance his knowledge in this area, Mr. Bianchi will study the spitball by taking a course at Rutgers University over the summer called "The Spitball, You and Society". He will study under the world renowned spitball expert Dr. Margaret J. Hocker. To enliven his course, Mr. Bianchi plans to show slides of multicolored, aged spitballs. Trips to museums featuring spitball exhibitions are also planned as are guest lecturers. One specific guest speaker that Mr. Bianchi is trying very hard to get is Arnold Goldberg who attained fame by miraculously shooting a spitball into President Nixon's mouth during his inaugural address.

In the area of languages, the Spanish department has decided that it is necessary for Spanish students to learn specialized dialects. Therefore, starting next year, students in Spanish I and 2 will receive training in Peruvian, New Brunswick, Lakewood, Rahway, and Piscataway dialects. A field trip is tentatively scheduled to meet in New York at 110th street and 3rd avenue. Instead of the usual bus transportation, the Spanish students (all 55 of them) will be squeezed into a 1962 purple and green Ford Fairlane with bald tires.

The tremendous success of behind the wheel driver training has prompted the start of a new course called "Vehicle Accident Repair". Because of time limitations and restrictions, it is planned to last only three weeks thus making it a crash course.

Mrs. Von Der Porten will be teaching a new course for next year called "Library Can Be Fun". Here, she will instruct future librarians in the proper methods of running a library. These methods include how to put only back issues of magazines on the shelf, how to keep all the lights on while showing a movie, and how to file books using the Dewey Decimal Eney Meney Miny Mo system.

One course, however, was turned down. This was to be called "Advanced Lunch". It was proposed by Millie for the purpose of training students in the art of opening cans of soup after the flip top breaks off, breaking plastic forks, feeding their ties into the change machine, and waiting for the money to register before pressing the button. The text thought to be used for this course was entitled "Eating The General Vending Way". The headmaster did veto it, though on the grounds that "the course smelled fishy."

URGE Apologizes For ARGO Mistake

by Mikel Porrus

Some nit-picking grumblers have brought to our attention that numerous words names and sounds have been misspelled recently in the URGE. We of the Urge staff, having considered all possible angles, have decided to atone for these errors. To the following people we humbly apologize: Mitchel Mutnyk, Jules and Sandra Shockette, David Hi-Man, Stephan E. Litnack, Jock Kamen, Chincy Greenspan, Ava Messnick, Soo Pallon and Bob Mashhead.

We have henceforth set out the following list of rules and regulations governing the misspelling an corrections of words.

- 1.) Henceforth all errors will be caught by proofreaders before they occur.
- 2.) If an aforementioned error happens to happen, the copireeder will catch it before it do.
- 3.) No words which have been proofreaded will be allowed to haf any letters uncommon to their spelling.

A Lonny Hert Dance Interview

by Lonny Hert

- L H When does Bokanon' birthday fall this year?
- K S By a recent act of Congress, this year Bokanon was born on February 33.
- L H Doesn't that create an obvious problem?
- K S Yes. February 30th is not a Friday. But fear not my dear Lonny. We're holding the dance February 29th, which is.
- L H That's a great example of the advantages of looking at the calendar and planning ahead. But what band are we hiring?
- K S At first I thought "Traffic" would be an improvement over the ones we usually get.
- L H The "traffic" that did "John Barleycorn"?
- K H No. The traffic on Easton Avenue. It would have been a great improvement, but they'll be playing at Carteret.
- L H So who is coming and how can you be sure that they won't drown themselves out?
- K S We're paying the "Copper Aardvarks" $100. I know they'll sound better than any band we've ever had.
- L H How can you be sure?
- K S I told them to come February 28th.
- L H Won't the students object?
- K S They won't notice. Nobody is dumb enough to go near Baldwin Hall where they know the awful music is playing.
- L H What will there be in the way of refreshments?

Diary Reveals Inner Stresses

by Chuck Eye-Sore

While walking past the office the other day, I was checking out the legs of a girl in front of me when I happen to notice a crumpled-up, trampled piece of paper on the floor. I nonchalantly picked it up and read it.

It was then and there that I realized that as a loyal Prepper I must execute my duties and reveal the contents of the before mentioned document. Here, then, for your perusal, is what I found:

JANUARY 28;

Dear dairy,

Being headmaster is so much fun! Today I sat in my office and laughed as all the kids went to their classes. I also put soap in Dr. Spurdutos' coffee! Boy, was Spudsy ever aussy! That was a lot of fun. Later, I caught two girls being naughty in the girls room. (I didn't even knock on the door this time ha... ha... ha) I threw them out and then finished their cigarettes.

Some little smart a--- started up on the bus strip this afternoon. He was pushed out of the window and when I tried to push him back in he punched me in the stomach. Mr. Bossman laughed so I punched him in the stomach and ran back to my office and cried.

I had a very nice day in school today. I hope tomorrow is fun too! Mr. Daviet said I might be able to play with the ditto machine! I hope so. Gee, ha is a nice man. Well... bye for now.....

Anderson Exposes Drug Ring At Prep

by Jack Anderson

Moral decay in America is a most distressing subject but nonetheless a very pressing problem. If current trends are to continue we may be observing the fall of the American Empire as we know it.

This being so you can well understand my dismay and horror when I learned of certain immoral and illegal actions in the Rutgers Preparatory School. Yes, even here, in one of the highest institutes of education of our time, that deadly sin "drugs" has manifested itself.

It is common knowledge that the headmaster of Rutgers Prep, one Dr. David Heinline, does a great deal of travelling. It is also known that a certain Robert Bianchi (alias "Freddy The Benny") likewise travels quite a bit. Both are astute leaders and thus I was shocked to learn that they were both involved in international drug traffic. That's right.

Rivalling my "Thomas Eagleton alcoholic" scoop, the "Heinline-Bianchi drug ring" may very well be the story of the year. My sources inform me that the headmaster, as the name implies, sets up the multi-million dollar drug deals with European big shots (namely his last trip to Switzerland) and then "Freddy The Benny" Bianchi goes over to secure the deal and supervise shipment to the States. This accounts for his most recent trips to Greece and Egypt. The "stuff", as they call it, is unloaded off the pier in Atlantic City, where Dr. Heinline often goes for frequent scholastic meetings (or so he says), and then shipped north. This is basically the extent of the ring.

For you nonbelievers who doubt the validity of my recent findings, we have further information to support our beliefs. Dr. Heinline was lately overheard talking to Mr. Bianchi in the halls a few days ago. According to my agent in Prep he asked Bianchi "Have you marked those papers yet?" Bianchi said "No" and asked for the whereabouts of Mr. Omara (possibly in cahoots with these criminals). To this Dr. Heinline replied "he's outside cutting the grass".

Further rumors have it that Mrs. "Bengal Tiger" Dutta may play a key role in the ring, but this is as yet unconfirmed. If any new information does come forth, however, we will let you know.

Evan Hickey Resumes ARGO-Ye-Dial Feud With Bold Attack

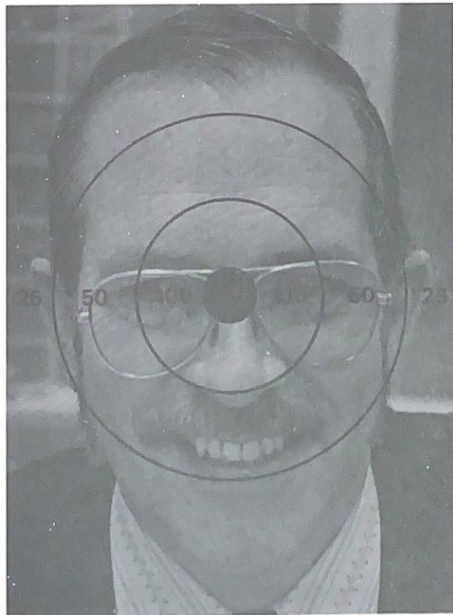

As perennial as Senior Class meetings, so is the YE DIAL - ARGO feud. This year's hostilities began when the Dial's infamous Evan Hickey under cover of darkness stole into the ARGO room and absconded with the Urge dummy. Editor Bore-up offered no resistance as he was bodily dragged up the stairs.

The ARGO countered by burning the bust of Hickey and threatened to print his biography on the front page of the URGE. Bore-up was returned anyway. We are now enjoying an uneasy peace, however there is no telling when Hickey may flare up again.

Editor's Note: This story makes no sense, but it certainly fills the hole we had here.

Interviewer Chuck Eye-Sore Has Exclusives With Babe And Paul

Interviewer: Hello Barbara. How are you?

Barbara: I'm fine. How about yourself?

Interviewer: Not too bad. Actually, I've had this pain in my left shoulder but it's not that serious. I rubbed some . . . HEY! I'm supposed to ask the questions around here!

Barbara: Well let's get on with it, locker breath.

Interviewer: Thanks a lot. O.K. Barbara, I guess the first thing that I'll ask you about is your nickname "Babe". Who first gave it to you and what is the real story behind it?

Barbara: Well, most people think that they call me Babe because of Babe Ruth, but that's not the real reason. Actually what happened was that a few years ago, after a basketball game, I came back to the locker room to shower and dress. Just as I reached my locker, still dripping wet, this weird guy jumps out of my locker and says "Hey, Babe, how about a little overtime with me?"

Interviewer: WOW! That's some story. What happened?

Barbara: Me and the other girls took care of him. And to think it was Mr. Chamberlain all the time.

Interviewer: That's amazing! Barbara: It sure is. I can't imagine how he could ever fit in my locker.

Interviewer: That story brings to mind another important question Babe. You don't mind me calling you Babe, do you?

Barbara: No. Just keep your paws off my body, mop face.

Interviewer: Back to that important question. Some people say that girls in Prep who play all these sports loose some of their femininity and become more masculine. What do you think about that?

Barbara: Show me the coward who said that and I'll bust his face!

Interviewer: Sorry I brought it up. To get off the subject a little, what do you think about the lay-up?

Barbara: Not before I'm married!

Interviewer: One last question Babe. For some of our younger readers who would like to improve their game; what's the best way to avoid fouling in a game?

Barbara: Don't play.

Interviewer: Thanks a lot!

Bigot Picked For Faculty Comedy

by T. P. Phitful

On the night of January 27, Dr. Fynelne and the Hord of Trustees held auditions for prejudiced teachers for the starring role in Prep's new bigot show "All in the Faculty". The winner was our own Plague Chamberlain beloved math teacher and part time sieve-salesman.

When asked how the Hord came to its decision, Dr. Fynelne replied, "At the first mention of the word bigot, we all decided on Lightning Jack McVegetable for his merciless persecution of the Computer Toegrading students. We then found a copy of The Art of Loving in amongst his poison pen programs. Something had to be wrong. So instead of McVegetable we selected Plague Chamberlain whose downright indiscriminate in that he harrasses everybody."

I then eagerly asked, "And when can we expect to be treated to the premier performance of this play?" Dr. Hynline seemed annoyed, but

On January 27 the following interview was conducted with senior Paul Smith:

INTERVIEWER: Well, Paul, you've come a long way from those days of walking under the kitchen table and reaching for a water glass, huh??

PAUL: Yeah, I guess.

INTERVIEWER: What plans have you now for the future, Paul?

PAUL: Well, after the game I guess I'll go home and have a glass of milk. Then I'll watch some T.V. and then eat, I guess. Maybe later, I'll . . .

INTERVIEWER: No, no, you misunderstood. I meant college. You know basketball; your life?

PAUL: Oh. Well, I want to grow up and play basketball.

INTERVIEWER: Is that it? I mean what about law career? Don't you want to practice?

PAUL: I practice every day after school.

INTERVIEWER: No. I thing you misunderstood my question again. I mean become a lawyer. Pass the bar.

PAUL: Please. Not so loud. The coach doesn't know I drink.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,
Being a member of the faculty, I of t-times find it rather difficult at to have my ideals and beliefs made

INTERVIEWER: Right . . . o.k. Paul. Let me ask some easy questions. What is your worst subject in school?

PAUL: Psychology.

INTERVIEWER: But that's not taught at Prep?

PAUL: Oh yeah? . . . I thought I was missing a lot of classes.

INTERVIEWER: To get back to basketball for a change, Paul, who do you admire most in professional basketball?

PAUL: Well, I really like Spencer Haywood!

INTERVIEWER: Oh really? I suppose that's because he is tall, yet moves like a guard, and is a super basketball player in every sense of the word. Right?

PAUL: Actually, I thought he had sexy legs.

INTERVIEWER: One last question Paul. With your love for the game, your vast knowledge of all the NBA teams which you follow intensely, and your tremendous basketball insight; which team do you pick to win the NBA championship this year?

PAUL: I can't see how the Vikings can loose.

INTERVIEWER: Neither can we Paul. Neither can we.

known to others. However I feel that certain circumstances exist which warrant me to come forth and remain silent no longer.

The vast majority of the faculty and I have noticed that many senior and junior boys are attending Rutgers Prep in violation of our appearance code; namely that "boys shall be clean shaven". There is no possible loose interpretation of this code. It must be observed to the letter.

As I mentioned before, it is common knowledge that various male upper classmen and a few advanced sophomores, are habitually in violation of this ordinance. I grant you many of them do shave but when they do they leave a thin hairless strip not more than a millimeter wide, between two enormous sideburns. Many of these so-called "sideburns" extend up to eight inches away from the violator's cheek! This hairy face practice must stop. Are we teachers expected to have to look at these hairy "animals" while we try to teach others who have come to school to learn?! How long must we endure this sacrilegious practice?! These "pre-cambrian beasts" should be thrown out of school and put where they belong: in a cage!!!!

To Polish Or Not To Polish

by Eye-Sore Again

It has come to the attention of this reporter that an uncomfortable and potentially hazardous situation is present in school that requires correction. The problem is that after any holiday, vacation, weekend, or for no apparent reason whatsoever, things in school get polished! Floors, desks, chalk-boards, tables, lockers, doorknobs, sinks, waterfountains, and various other objects take on a blinding luster. Many students are falling in the halls due to slippery floors and the resulting glare. Others wander about aimlessly through the halls attempting to feel their way to class.

One class where the problem is most annoying is that of Mr. Beronio. Besides the regular glare problems, here students have to put up with excessive reflection off of Mr. Beronio's head. Students are therefore blinded and thus can not see the board or, for that matter, anything.

The following proposals should be adopted to try to cut down, if not minimize the problem. I urge the administration consider them strongly since any accident resulting from the polishing problem is not covered in their insurance. Here, then, are my suggestions:

- 1) Carpeting be installed throughout the building except in the girls room where it would constitute a fire hazard.
- 2) Dirt, stones, and gravel be periodically sprinkled on the floor to insure footing.
- 3) Water is to be sprayed on everything to promote rust.
- 4) All students are to be issued sun-glasses.
- 5) Mr. Beronio must wear a toupee while on campus.

I hope that these measures be implemented in the near future so that Rutgers Preparatory School be a safer place in which to gain an education.

New Dance Cont . . .

K S Ex Lax. We want everyone to go. Seriously, we're sending some seniors with cars to bring back stuff from McDonald's.

L H Why?
K S It's closer than Burger King.
L H Why is the dance on Bokonos's birthday?

K S Because he was a great philosopher, he is the underground school hero, and besides, it was the only "purpose" the administration would accept.

L H We're running out of time and space, so one last question. Who was Bokonos anyway?

K S Who cares, I'm having a party at my house that night anyway.

Smoking Scandal Sweeps School

by John Conhorny

The outside casing of a pack of cigarettes was found today by one of the schools custodians. The brand of this "weed" was Camel non-filters, known as the deadliest form of "Tobacous Nicotialis". When asked how the pack was found, the custodian (who prefers to remain nameless) said he was taking care of some "personnel business" when the discovery was made. After the discovery, he picked up the packaging (with his handkerchief) and gave it to Dr. Spurduto, who immediately sent the packaging to the nearest office of the F.B.I. for fingerprint analysis.

The next day in school an in-depth investigation was held; where each suspect, alone, was led into the dark conference room. There, Dr. Spurduto began a blistering interrogation.

Several days later, the school invited many guest speakers to talk on the dangers of smoking. Speeches, films, and demonstrations were held for the entire day. Posters were put all over the school. All was going fine until the FBI report came in.

The pack of cigarettes belonged to a well known member of the Faculty who shall remain nameless.
