THEATER CLUB SEES "JUNO AND THE PAYCOCK"

Boys Open Season with Sean
 O'Casey's Tragedy
 Performance of Irish Players Enjoyed By All

The Rutgers Prep Theater Club opened its season last Friday night by journeying to New York to see the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin, Ireland present "Juno and the Paycock", a powerful tragedy by Sean O'Casey. The play, looked upon by critics as the best the Abbey Players have yet produced, is most unusual, its tragedy being made more poignant by the high comedy of its beginning. The story deals with the downfall of the fortunes of "Captain" Boyle, portrayed by P.J. Carolan, his wife, "Juno" Boyle, played by Eileen Crowe, and their children, Johnny and Mary, portrayed by Arthur Shields and Aileen O'Connor. The boys especially enjoyed the strong portrayal of the drunken, worthless "Captain" and his patient, suffering wife. The next play which the Club hopes to see is "The Star-Wagon", by Maxwell Anderson, starring Burgess Meredith and Lillian Gish.

SWIMMERS SHOW GENERAL
 ALL ROUND IMPROVEMENT

Practice, last week, brought out more of the rights and wrongs of swimming. Some boys are striving to become good distance men, while others, doing continuous sprints, are practicing for the shorter distances. If this is any foreshadowing, we can take for granted the results of the coming season. Time trials brought out the following results:

ONCE MORE PREP HAS
 INTERMURAL COMPETITION
 Burton, Starbuck, Green and Sykes Elected Officers
 WHITES BEAT REDS

The Traps, some time ago, organized an Association of their own to further competition among the boarding boys. After electing G. Burton, president, Johnny Starbuck, vice president, R. Greene, corresponding secretary, Jay Sykes, statistical secretary, they divided the boys into two teams of about twenty members each. These teams, the Whites and the Reds, compete to gain points by getting high averages scholastically and by winning various intramural games. The teams are captained by Albie Holzl and "Buzz" Freile. At specified time the scores will be added up and the better team gets some sort of prize, not yet announced.

The first game of the series was played last week. The Whites considered the underdogs, went into the game fighting and came out on top, by a score of 31 to 13

Whites	Reds
F. A. Holzl	Buzz Freile
F. Dick Meyers	Jay Sykes
C. Mose Groome	Ray Greene
G. Ray Kravetz	Ed Straus

MOYNIHAN SELECTED AS
 ALL-STATE CENTER

Harvey Moynihan, Rutgers Prep sophomore substitute pivot man, was recently selected on the "Newark Star Eagle" all-state third team.

Moynihan has been alternating with George Burton, dynamic varsity center, who was molested throughout the season with a shoulder injury. When your scrib asked Harvey what his reactions were, he said, "I feel the same." If Harvey continues to develop his natural ability, he will probably attain a higher ranking next year.

We, the football squad and the members of the student body, congratulate you, Harvey.
