Increase Representation
Michael Jacobs '64 suggested that the Varsity "R" Club,
The Argo, and Ye Dial should each have a non-voting member on the Council. He also stated that he would like to see the Volunteer Committee re-instituted to work at hospitals during Christmas and Spring Vacations.
The successful viee-presidential aspirant. Carole Neivert '64, who will chair the Dance Committee, favored only one hayride during the year and holding dances with other schools, perhaps under the auspicies of the Small School Student Council Association.

Stresses Spirit

In his speech, Secretary-Elect Michael Gottlieb 6, emphasized the importance of spirit in the School. While he felt that it is good, he recognized the need for improvement, Georgia Spiro '66, who ram with Jacobs, James Gunkle '64, and Gottlieb, called attention to the importance of intelligent voting on the Council. She supported a budget similar to the one used this year.

The Student Party nearly swept the Student Council Elections yesterday, taking three out of four positions amid a great amount of tickit-splitting.

Michael Jacobs '64 is the new president of the Rutgers Preparatory School student body, Carole Neivert '64 is vice-president, Michael Gottlieb '65 is secretary, and Georgia Spiro '66 is treasurer for the 1963-64 school year.

In the presidential battle Jacobs and Alfred Kellogg '64, who ran on the Elective Party, were neck and neck through the first third of the balloting. The candidates were tied five times in the early returns.

Soon Jacobs pulled away, and although Kellogg narrowed the gap twice, he never again threatened the Jacobs victory. Jacobs received a small majority of yotes-cast.

From the start Neivert was the obvious victor in the vice-presidential contest, Leading after the first ballots were counted, she gradually increased her lead until she came close to a majority.
